Shopping for groceries is a headache for many, especially college students. Students don't have the time or money to waste on mindless grocery shopping. The Walmart app's new update integrates advanced generative AI technology, allowing customers to create grocery lists, hassle free, and have an in-store route curated for them based on their list. Today's deals and cheapest brands among each item will be listed as well! Whether planning a football tailgate or meal prepping for the week, users can now get in and out of any store location efficiently and cost effectively.

"The newest innovations and features added to the Walmart app are revolutionary and will change how people shop and spend," said Sarah Hoover, the head of tech operations.

Getting started is simple; go to the Apple App Store, download the latest version of the Walmart app and create an account. Tell Siri or type in the app what groceries you need for the future and see how you can save money, and be as efficient in the store as possible.
